The despatches said the marriage would be performed at El Mirasol, the estate of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury. Mr. Thomas was divorced in 1919. His former wife, Mrs. Blanche Oelrichas Thomas, obtained the decree from the Paris courts. The news of the divorce was not made known in New York until early in 1920. Mrs. Thomas, who was married last August to John Barrymore, has been known as one of the mest beautiful women in the country.

Mrs. Sackett obtained a divorce in Reno recently from Austin Townsend Sackett, son of Mrs. Charles Adams Sackett. Before her marriage she was Mrs. Islanded by George H. # MISS DORIS KEANE REVIVES EDWARD SHELDON'S 'ROMANCE'

'Mr. Pim Passes By' a Mildly Amusing

> by A. A. Milne at the Garrick.

Eight-Year-Old Play Absorbing as Ever With Popular Star in Original Role.

Mrs. Whitney Warren did not accompany Mr. Warren to Europe as reported in a cable despatch from London to The New York Herald. Mr. Warren salled recently for the purpose of surveying the work of restoring the famous library and other of the university buildings at Louvain that were destroyed by the Germans. He will be absent a few weeks. The sewing class of the Fresh Air Opera singers of to-day, besides many to view "Romance," which Miss Doris Keane revived last night, for half a century ago, when a prima donna was a town personage and was drawn through the streets on her departure by frantically cheering young men in a torchlight parade. Any diva will tell you that was the day for singers, when their comings and goings meant comething to the city's peace of mind.

After presenting this play by Edward Sheldon in England, where it had quite a vogue for four years, Miss Keane brings it back, again under Lee Shubert's management, as the real operatic season is drawing to a close, perhaps with a thought that it may keep alive the impressions of opera until the season recommences. This is a distinct possibility, for it takes a very bad actress to kill public interest in professional people—especially prima donnas—off stage, and Miss Keane's performance last night was up to the 100 per cent. Since it was first produced at Maxine Elliott's Theatre eight years ago some may have forgotten the story, though it was broken to them gently a short time ago in the movies by Miss Keane. It starts with an aged Bishop who, to the young grandson's desires to cure his young grandson's desires to her $10,000 bid she said she will give that also to the fund.

The collection, containing about 350 items, was catalogued by George H. Sargent and edited by the American Art Association, which gave the use of its gallers free and arranged also to sell it gratuitously.

President Wilson sent his signed photograph and an autograph matuscript. It contained his plea for justice to all peoples and nationalities and their right to live on equal terms of liberty and safety with one another, whether strong or weak.

The late Theodore Rooseveit sent a one page manuscript, dated February 1, 1918, saying:

"No great nation has ever on so great a scale shown such heroism and such devotion as France has shown in the last three and a half years."

Blunder of a Stranger.

Then Mr. Chambers is experienced onough to know that there must be some plausible foundation for even the lightest comedy. But all there was last night as the cornerstone of three acts was the blunder of a passing stranger. He gave the wrong name of a man who was mistaken for the heroine's first husband. He had other adventures in idlocy before the play was finished. But none, of course, could stand as the basis of a comedy. The most castly persuaded they were could not help feeling that Four playlets to which Miss Clare Kummer gave oxygen at the Punch and Judy Theatre at the first of a series of special matiness yesterday were just like Miss Kummer—like, that is, a witty woman talking at a dinner and seeking to shock and at the same time amuse the company and take their minds off the interminable courses. The chief noveity was "The Robbery," in which the robber proves not to be one at all, but simply the young man across the street, who, locked out by his father late at night, rushes across on hearing the screams of a young woman left atone by her parents, and have bedd from his parents home to-day, and the screams of a young woman left atone by her parents, and in a national cometery. seeking to shock and at the same time amuse the company and take their minds off the interminable courses.
